

Sally Smith

Sally has been the Head of School of Computing at Edinburgh Napier University since 2008. Prior to that Sally was a subject group leader for software engineering. Working with ScotlandIS and e-skills UK, she is also the Project Director of e-Placement Scotland, a Scottish Funding Council project designed to create 750 new paid placements for computing students across Scotland.

Sally's technical research interest is context aware systems and she teaches mobile apps development. Her wider research interests include the construction of professional identity and placement outcomes.

Sally studied Maths at Aberdeen University and Computer Science at City University.