

Suraj Bramhavar – Advanced Research and Invention Agency (ARIA)

Suraj Bramhavar is a Programme Director at the Advanced Research and Invention Agency (ARIA) where he is building a Programme designed to drop the hardware cost to train large-scale AI models by 1000x. He has spent the past 15 years working at the forefront of advanced computing, first as a researcher at Intel Corp., then at MIT Lincoln Laboratory, and subsequently as CTO of Sync Computing which he co-founded based on his research at the Lab